

Internal audit is a change leader

Internal Audit as the Enterprise Change Leader in our Dynamic and Ever-Changing World

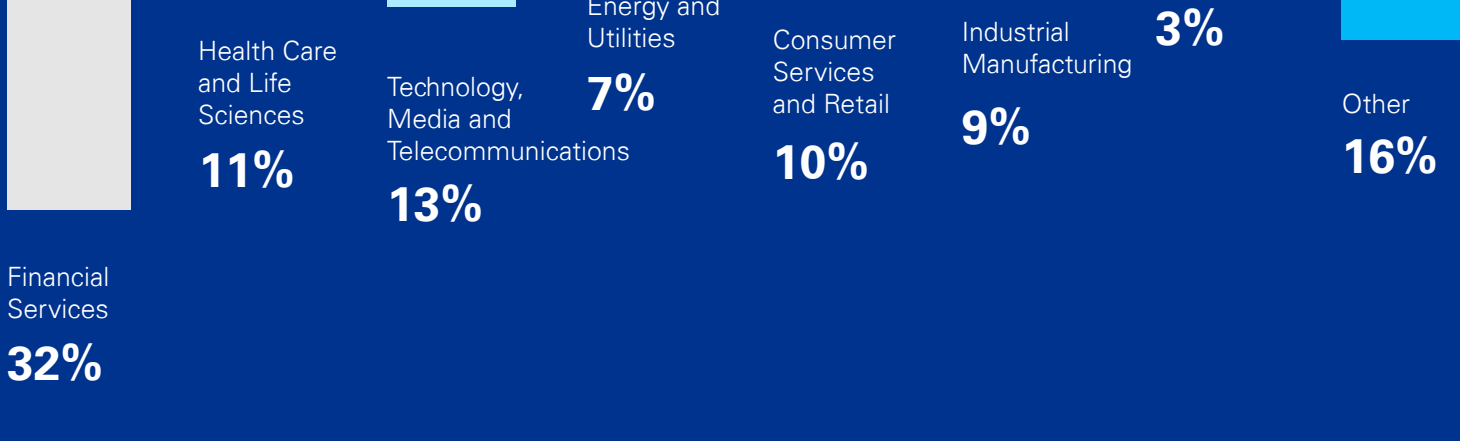

KPMG hosted the latest installment of our CAE Share Forum series in early summer 2024. During this share forum, we polled almost 2,000 professionals who hold various internal audit (IA) and risk positions at their respective companies.

Here's what we learned...

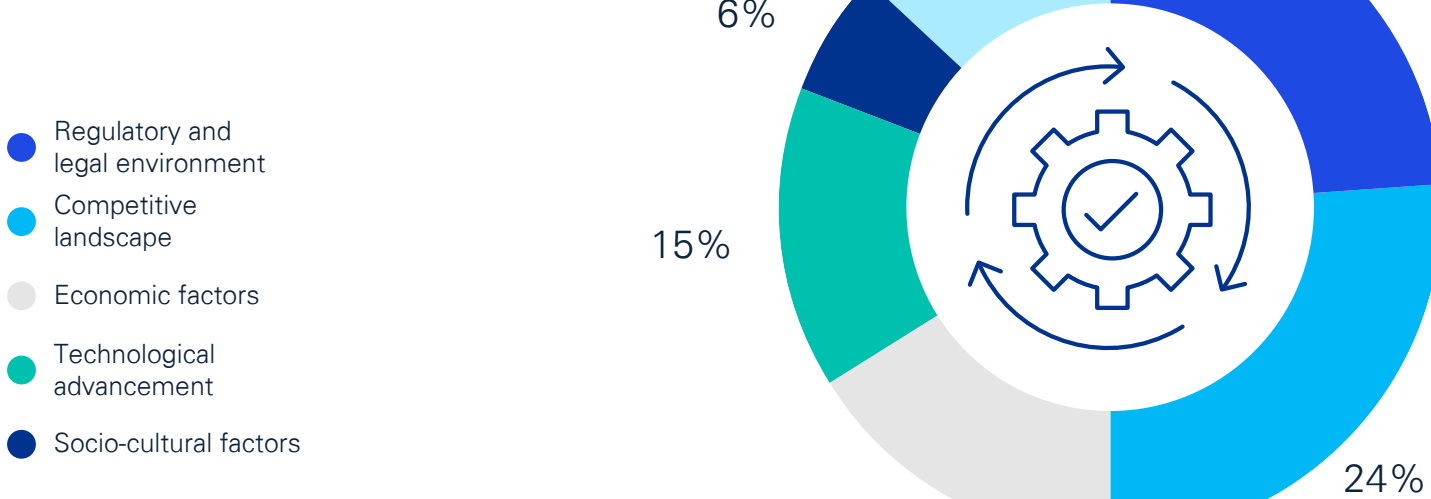

*Due to rounding, percentages may not always equal 100%.

What industry does your company operate in?

Total: 1391 respondents

What is the biggest external driver of change on your organization?

Total: 986 respondents

What strategies are drawing the most focus of your organization's leadership in 2024?

Total: 948 respondents

What change management practices should IA adopt to better support management ambition to drive change?

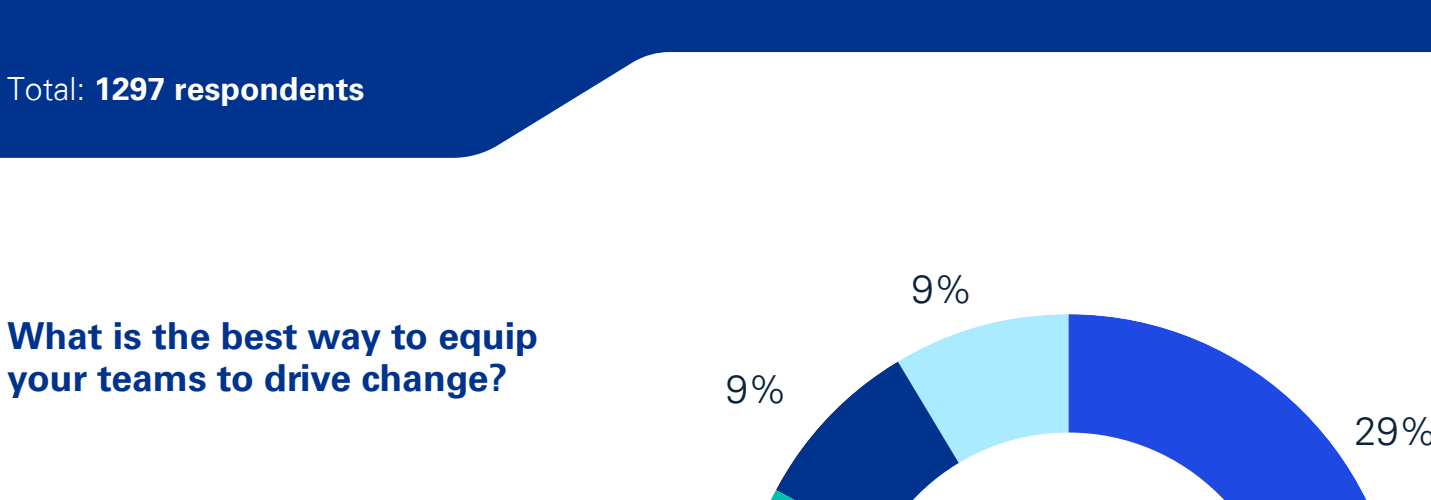

Total: 1429 respondents

As IA functions are more reliant than ever on top talent, what specialty are you currently focusing on?

Total: 1297 respondents

What is the best way to equip your teams to drive change?

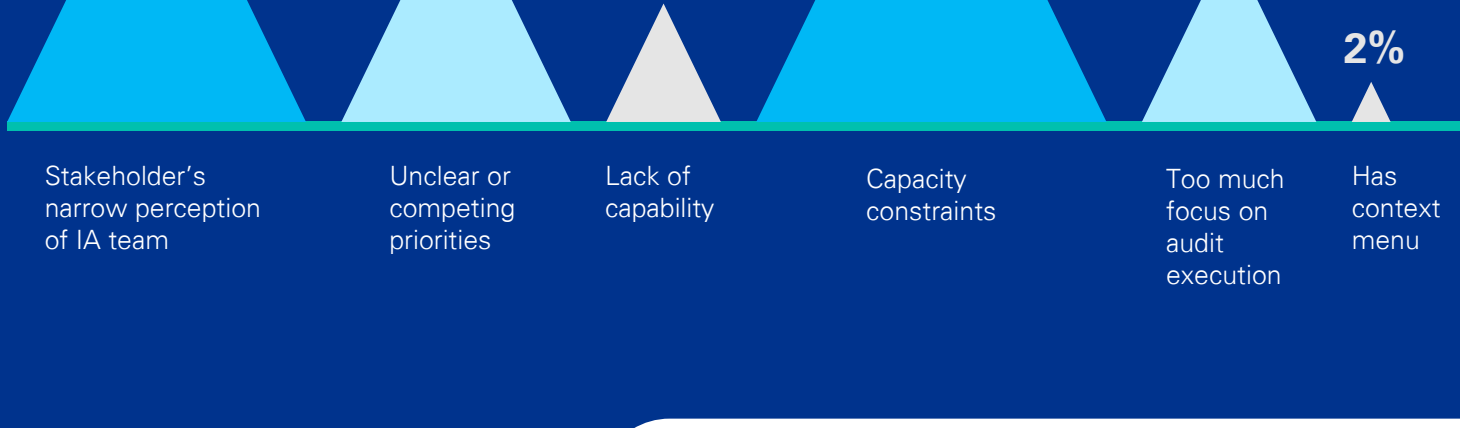

Total: 1407 respondents

What is the biggest barrier you face enabling your IA team to be seen as a change leader in the organization?

Final: 1274 respondents

What strategies can CAEs employ to overcome barriers and enable the IA team to be seen as change leaders within the organization?

Total: 948 respondents

For more internal audit insights, visit our thought leadership webpage at visit.kpmg.us/FutureOfInternalAudit

Contact:

Michael A. Smith
 US Internal Audit Solution Leader
 KPMG LLP
 E: michaelsmith@kpmg.com