OECD Published CARF and Amendments to CRS

On October 10th, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) published a new global tax transparency framework, the Crypto-Asset Reporting Framework (CARF), which is designed to initiate automatic tax information exchange of transactions involving crypto-assets. CARF also includes amendments to the OECD Common Reporting Standard (CRS) which broadens the scope of requirements to cover certain digital financial products, and includes additional changes to enhance reporting as jurisdictions have gained experience in the area of CRS compliance and reporting.

Background:

The CRS was developed in 2014 to facilitate the automatic exchange of information (AEOI) of certain financial accounts by providing participating jurisdictions with a means to identify amounts held overseas by their tax residents who may be able to evade tax. The CRS regime has been considered a very successful international effort. As recently noted by OECD Secretary-General Mathias Cormann, over 100 jurisdictions exchanged information on 111 million transactions in 2021, covering assets of EUR 11 trillion. However, a key tenet of digital assets is the lack of a central administrator, meaning that they can be exchanged outside of traditional financial intermediaries, thus bypassing legacy reporting checkpoints. In addition, the proliferation of digital assets for investment and financial uses gave rise to a new form of intermediaries and service providers, such as crypto-asset exchanges and digital wallets, which remain unregulated under legacy systems. These developments reduced the visibility of foreign transactions, leading to difficulty in verifying whether the associated tax liabilities are appropriately reported and

IRS Issues XML Schema and Business Rules for Electronic Filing of Form 1042

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) announced that it has distributed Form 1042 XML Schemas and Business Rules packages for the 2022 tax year. As discussed on a new IRS webpage, 2022 Valid XML Schemas and Business Rules for 1042 Modernized e-File (MeF), here, the packages were provided to assist software developers and transmitters in developing software for Form 1042 for the 2022 tax year. Registered users can access the packages by logging into their Secure Object Repository (SOR) e-services mailbox. As mentioned on the webpage, developers should pay attention to the Release Memo issue date to ensure that they are referring to the latest version, as multiple versions of the XML Schemas and Business Rules will be published throughout the year. Note that the schemas and rules were provided for planning purposes, but will not be used in the Assurance Testing System (ATS) or Production, which will open for testing on October 24. For further information, see the general MeF ATS webpage, here, and the Tax Year 2022 Form 1042 MeF ATS Information webpage, here. KPMG will continue to monitor for updates.

KPMG Reminders and Observations:

In 2021, the IRS published proposed regulations to lower the threshold for electronically filing information returns, once finalized. As discussed in KPMG IRP e-Alert #2021-25, here, the update is expected to increase the timeliness and accuracy of processing refunds and credits claimed by foreign persons that have amounts withheld and reported on Form 1042-S. During a recent IRS training webinar, see KPMG IRP e-Alert #2022-25, here, the speakers noted that the proposed regulations will also require certain filers to electronically file Form 1042. Specifically, withholding agents (other than an individual, estate, or trust) will be required to file the Form 1042 electronically if the withholding agent is required to file 10 or more information returns annually. Partnerships with more than 100 partners will be required to file the Form 1042 electronically regardless of the number of information returns required.
