

Enhancing the Planning, Programming, Budgeting, and Execution (PPBE) experience

The Department of Defense's (DoD) Planning, Programming, Budgeting, and Execution (PPBE) process is its main framework for resource allocation and strategic planning. However, the PPBE Reform Commission highlighted significant criticisms of the current PPBE process and calls for change.

In his Message to the Force, the Secretary of Defense emphasized the need for DoD to match threats through capabilities, reforming financial management to proactively and efficiently address mission requirements.

Recognizing the need for transformation, KPMG collaborated with MeriTalk to survey 150 federal financial systems managers and decision-makers across finance and information technology departments to understand their specific challenges.

Common challenges

Data management and analytics

Inefficient data management and analytics leads to inconsistencies, data silos, and unactionable data

Policies and processes

Inefficient workflows and manual processes result in increased labor demands, human errors, and redundancies

Technology

Outdated technology fails to keep pace with current mission demands, creating manual intensive business processes and audit risks.

Governance, risk, and compliance

Governance, risk, and compliance issues compromise integrity and reliability, impeding an organization's ability to maintain operational stability, achieve strategic objectives, and respond proactively to emerging threats and regulatory changes
